14. Records of local authorities

- (1) The Director shall establish a network of branch offices of the Department each serving one or more regions of the United Republic.
- (2) The head of each such branch office shall be responsible to the Director for implementing the general policy of government in respect of public records of local authorities in the regions which that branch office serves.
- (3) In respect of public records created, received and maintained by local authorities the responsibilities set out under sections 9 and 10 of this Act shall be those of the heads of such local authorities and the responsibilities set out under sections 11, 12 and 13 shall be those of the heads of the appropriate branch offices of the Department.
- (4) Records centres and archival repositories established in the regions shall be regarded as being under the control of the Director of the Records and Archives Management Department and the public records therein as being in his custody for the purposes of this Act.

- (5) Where there is no archival repository within the regions served by a branch office of the Department, the Director may direct the transfer of archives to the National Archives or to any other archival repository under his control until such time as an archival repository to serve those regions may be established.

15. Places of deposit

- (1) Where it appears to the Minister on the advice of the Advisory Board that a place other than the National Archives or another archival under the control of the Director—
 - (a) affords suitable facilities for the safekeeping and preservation of public records of permanent value and for their consultation by the public; and
 - (b) is adequately and independently funded for those purposes,he may appoint it as a place of deposit for specified public records.
- (2) Before the Minister makes such an appointment, and periodically thereafter, the Director shall inspect the proposed place of deposit and report to the Minister and the Advisory Board on its suitability.
- (3) The authority responsible for the public records in a place of deposit shall prepare appropriate guides, lists, indexes and other finding aids to those records and submit copies to the Director.
- (4) If a place of deposit fails to maintain facilities or to submit copies of its finding aids or ceases to be adequately funded, the Minister on the advice of the Advisory Board may revoke its appointment.

Part IV – Access to public records (s. 16)

16. Thirty years rule

- (1) Subject to any written law prohibiting or limiting the disclosure of information in any public record, public records in the National Archives, in any other archival repository under the control of the Director or in a place of deposit appointed under section 15 of this Act, shall be available for public inspection after the expiration of a period of thirty years from their creation, calculated as prescribed in subsection (2) of section 4 of this Act, except in so far as a longer or shorter period may have been prescribed by the Minister by regulations made in accordance with section 28 of this Act at the request of the head of the public office which created the records or its successor in function.
- (2) At the expiration of the period of thirty years prescribed in subsection (1) above, any records which have been classified as confidential or secret shall cease to be so classified and to be subject to the National Security Act³ except in so far as they may fall into the categories specified in subsection (3) and a longer period than thirty years has been prescribed under subsection (1).
- (3) A longer period than thirty years may be prescribed under subsection (1) only when there is a continuing need to restrict public access on grounds of—
 - (a) national security;
 - (b) maintenance of public order;
 - (c) safeguarding the revenue; or
 - (d) protection of the privacy of living individuals.

- (4) Public records to which members of the public had access before transfer into the custody of the Director or to a place of deposit appointed under section 14 of the Act shall continue to be open to public inspection irrespective of their age.

Part V – Financial provisions (ss. 17-20)
